Thermo Electric (TE) is pleased to announce the establishment of the Company's "Corporate Buyer's office" which will be responsible for managing all North American procurement operations and linking the procurement for each Thermo Electric manufacturing facility through electronic communication and the company's newly installed operating system. The Corporate Buyer's Office will be located at Thermo Electric's new facility in Cleveland Ohio.

The Corporate Buyer's Office is established to meet the needs of the Company's growing and diverse customer base where sourcing raw material of the highest quality on the best terms of price and delivery has become an essential ingredient in the American industrial marketplace. By centralizing our procurement requirements through one location Thermo Electric is now able to better manage its supply chain and better communicate with the hundreds of excellent vendors that have served the company through its many years of operations. At Thermo Electric we believe that our suppliers are of equal importance as our customers because we realize that it is essential to secure quality raw material components in order to produce a superior sensor product.

John Milburn, a former associate of Gary Kloock, Chief Operating Officer joins TE as its newly appointed "Corporate Buyer" having managed procurement activities at his former employers. John brings to TE his own background and familiarity with the temperature sensor market and has been fully integrated into the TE corporate culture after months of training at our Corporate Offices.
